

PASSING ON THE GIFT TO IMPROVE OTHER FAMILIES

Water buffaloes are excellent animals for reforestation. They can move well in tropical and dry regions, muddy areas, and on strenuous terrain. They have hooves that are designed to prevent them from slipping and sliding in the mud.

Water buffaloes can provide milk containing more calcium, protein, and potassium than cow's milk, which makes it a better nutritional supplement for infants. They yield between 7 and 11 liters of milk per day and provide offspring every two years. Therefore, Aeta Tribe Foundation created "Passing on the gift..."

A family who receives a female water buffalo from a donor will, in turn, become donors as they pass on the water buffalo to another family in the village or community once the offspring are born. The impact is 10 times greater as each female buffalo gives birth beginning at five (5) years of age and continues to produce offspring every two years until 25 years of age.

Please give a gift that truly makes a difference and helps to lift families out of hunger and poverty. We are an IRS-approved charity, and your donations can be written off on your US tax returns.
